Some years ago, in the Fall of 1993, the Association for the Study of American Literatures published a 30-page guide to Native American Studies programs in the U.S., compiled and edited by former ASAIL President Franchot Ballinger. This new Guide to Native American Studies Programs in the United States and Canada represents an attempt to update and expand upon Professor Ballinger's pioneering work. In accordance with a 1995 ASAIL resolution, it is being published both in hardcopy form and in electronic form, so as to be available not only to ASAIL members but also to non-members, compliments of the Association.

I wish to take this opportunity to acknowledge the invaluable assistance of two SAIL Editorial Assistants, Amy Davidson (1995-96) and Corrie Anderson (1996-97), who in addition to their other duties put in many hours of overtime gathering and regathering, collating and recollating information from a variety of sources including questionnaires, follow-up letters and phone calls, and worldwide websites. Thanks also to Karen Strom at University of Massachusetts, who read the final draft of this guide and provided or corrected many of the URL addresses for program websites.

Our dream was to provide a comprehensive survey of U.S. and Canadian Native American Studies programs being offered as majors, minors, and certifications at the baccalaureate level or above, using (with some slight modifications and additions) Professor Ballinger's earlier categories of information on each program. And although we have made a considerable effort to locate, contact, and acquire information about Native American Studies programs (by whatever title: Native American Studies and American Indian Studies are the most common designations, though there are others) at all North American baccalaureate-granting institutions, readers should keep in mind that the Guide is still far from complete. There are a number of reasons for this, and I'd point to two in particular. First, several programs that we located declined to provide information; in those cases we have elected not to list that school or that program. Exceptions to this rule are programs having substantial www sites; in these cases we have attempted to construct full or partial entries from information made available at those sites. Second, we suspect that we did not succeed in locating all the existing programs. It is thus possible, even likely, that several substantial programs were never contacted by us in the first place.

We are working on ways to correct these problems in order to increase the accuracy and comprehensiveness, not only of possible future print versions, but also of this electronic version of the guide. Because this website can be conveniently upgraded more frequently than a print guide, it has the potential to become the most reliable source of such information available anywhere, anytime, to everyone. For these reasons, I am hoping that anyone who knows of a program that is not represented in this publication, or who knows of any inaccuracies herein, will contact me at rnelson@richmond.edu or fill out the survey form we have designed for this purpose, to let us know about any errors, omissions, or updates in Native Studies programs being offered in North America at the baccalaureate level or higher.

(A note on alphabetization: consistent with PMLA Directory style, for purposes of ordering entries alphabetically we have ignored "University of" and "College of" openers to names of institutions, with the exception that "State University of New York" entries have been entered as though they were "SUNY" followed by local campus designation.)

http://www.uaf.edu/ans/

name\title of head\director: James Ruppert, Chair degrees granted: B.A. (major and minor); M.A. Cross-cultural Studies.

description of program offerings: This program emphasizes social science and Humanistic approaches to Alaska Native Cultures. The curriculum, degree requirements, and special activities are shaped largely by five organizing principles: emphasis on changing conditions of Alaska Native life, recognition of Alaska Native cultural pluralism and varieties of historic experiences, inquiry into Alaska Native encounters with culturally different aspects of American life and institutions, and understanding the developing Alaska Native humanities in a changing world. Courses include Language and Culture, Contemporary Native American Literature, Narrative Art of Alaska Native Peoples, Cultural Knowledge of Elders, Federal Indian Law and Alaska Native Leadership Perspectives, Rhetorical Expression of the Alaska Native Experience, Native American Religion and Philosophy, Alaska Native Education, Alaska Native Social Change.

areas of faculty interest\expertise: Native education, tribal political organization, social change, oral and written literatures, Native dance and drama, federal Indian law, Aboriginal rights.

resources available: In addition to having a high number of Native students, the University is close to tribal groups, owns an extensive collection of audio tapes, is a center of major contemporary political and cultural activities, provides Native dance classes, has an Elder-In-Residence program and sponsors a yearly performing arts festival featuring Native dance and theater.

financial aid available to students: Aid is available through UAF Financial Aid Office rather than through the department.

distance learning: Some ANS courses are offered through distance delivery. See The Center for Distance Education (www.uaf.edu/educ/distance/center.html), College of Rural and Community Development (www.alaska.edu/rural), and the Center for Cross Cultural Studies (www.uaf.edu/cxcs). The Department also supports a M.A. in Cross-cultural Studies which is delivered primarily through Distance Education: see http://www.uaf.edu/cxcs/masters.html.

degree(s) granted: B.A. Major description of program offerings: American Indian Studies is a major that gives students the opportunity to learn about the original, indigenous cultures of North America. Students will be provided with a multidisciplinary understanding of the history and present situation of American Indians. The program emphasizes the interrelations among history, culture, language, literature, the arts, philosophy, religion, political and social forces, and the legal status and sovereignty of American Indians. This course of study exposes students to the richness and beauty of North American Indian cultures.

areas of faculty interest\expertise: Hollywood and Indigenous film, Native American Women, Contemporary Issues--local and global, Traditional and Contemporary Art, Literature, History, Storytelling, Religious and Philosophical Thought. As a group, our faculty has worked to provide experiential educational opportunities through travel seminars to central American and across local regions, through internships and applied research for local organizations.

resources available: Augsburg Native American Film Series, Native American Writer's Series, Augsburg Indigenous Student Association, American Indian Student Support Program, Storytelling Forum, on-campus speakers, and a growing collection of Native American film, literature, art, history, and cultural texts in our college library.

name/title of head/director: Linc Kesler, Director degree(s) granted: B.A. major and minor

description of program offerings: Curriculum is interdisciplinary and students are able to choose from a wide variety of courses across the university. Core curriculum is designed to assist students in integrating their studies around core issues in Indigenous thought, and towards developing their capacity to complete the capstone fourth-year research practicum. The research practicum partners students with community organizations that identify research needs that students address by designing projects, negotiating their terms, and completing their implementation.

areas of faculty interest/expertise: Core faculty currently have expertise in Aboriginal politics, international Indigenous rights movements, literature and media, Indigenous feminism, critical theory, and documentary and oral history. Many other forms of expertise are available through interdisciplinary linkages.

resources available: Program is supported by the Xwi7xwa Library, a branch of the university library with core expertise in Indigenous topics, classifications, and search techniques.

financial aid available to students: Financial aid is available through university sources.

number of students in program: Approximately 100, with about 35 declared majors.

distance learning: Program has online resources, but does not offer online courses.

degree(s) granted: Bachelor Degree in Aboriginal Adult Education; Bachelor of Education - Primary and Junior (Aboriginal) description of program offerings: Bachelor of Education in Aboriginal Adult Education Program: The Bachelor of Education in Aboriginal Adult Education Program (ABADED Program) as well as a Certificate in Aboriginal Adult Education is designed to enhance the abilities of individuals working with, or aspiring to work with Aboriginal adult populations in a variety of educational/training contexts. The ABADED Program incorporates Aboriginal learning preferences and relies on a wide reflection of Aboriginal cultures and traditions. This community-based curriculum model relies on qualified local Aboriginal educators to facilitate the learner's educational journey. Courses are offered in a facilitated learning cohort model, face-to-face at numerous locations across the province. Bachelor of Education - Primary and Junior (Aboriginal): The Bachelor of Education degree for students interested in teaching at the Primary/Junior level (grades K-6). The program incorporates Aboriginal learning preferences and cultural diversity. This community-based curriculum model relies on qualified local Aboriginal educators to facilitate the learner's educational journey. Courses are offered in a facilitated learning cohort model, face-to-face at locations across the province. Successful graduates will receive a Bachelor of Education degree. Upon successful completion of a teacher education program, teacher candidates are normally recommended to the Ontario College of Teachers for membership and to receive their Ontario Certificate of Qualification. Native Teacher Education Program: The Native Teacher Education Program for students interested in teaching at the Primary/Junior level (grades K-6). This program incorporates Aboriginal learning preferences and cultural diversity. This community-based curriculum model relies on qualified local Aboriginal educators, as well as Brock University faculty. The program leads to the Ontario Certificate of Qualification for elementary teaching. This program runs on weekends over a period of three years.

- Dept. of Native American Studies, One Shields Ave., University of California, Davis CA 95616; (530)752-3237

name/title of head/director: Inés Hernández-Avila, Chair

degrees granted: B.A. (major and minor); M.A.; Ph.D.; M.A. and Ph.D. w/ Designated Emphasis in Native American Studies for doctoral students enrolled in graduate programs in English, History, Spanish, Comparative Literature, Anthropology, Sociology, Psychology, and Performance Studies.

description of program offerings: The Department of Native American Studies focuses on the indigenous peoples of the Americas, on the peoples, nations, tribes, and communities whose ancestors have lived in North, Central and South America from earliest times. It is interdisciplinary in its scholarly approach to the world of American Indian peoples, offering a comprehensive and comparative perspective, including attention to the increasing dislocation and diaspora of indigenous people throughout the Americas.

At the Master's level, we offer a course of study designed to prepare students for work in tribal administration and education, museums and cultural centers, community development, and public policy. The Master's program also prepares students to teach in tribal or other community colleges. NAS Master's students have pursued law school as well as further study in Native American Studies or related fields.

At the Ph.D. level, we offer a course of study designed to train, strengthen and enlarge the critical mass of scholars working within the field of Native American Studies. Our graduates will be positioned to contribute to Native critical and creative intelligence in all its complexity. They will take their place as scholars within Native American Studies programs and relevant disciplines within social sciences and humanities.

areas of faculty interest/expertise: Native American/Indigenous ethnohistory/history; literature; art, art history, museum studies; language and linguistics; politics and development; religion and philosophy; racism and colonialism; ethnomusicology; indigenous writing systems (e.g., Maya); migration and transnationalism; refugees and human rights; Native women; environmental studies; performance and dance studies; Eastern North America, Southwest/North Mexico, Great Basin, California, Mexico, Central America, South America.

resources available: Within NAS: IRCA (Indigenous Research Center of the Americas); Native American Language Center; C. N. Gorman Museum; NASU (Native American Student Union), AISES (American Indian Science and Engineering Society), NEUE (Natives Empowered through Unity in Education), Native American Law Student Association. There is one Native staff person in the EOP/SAA office on campus who works with Native students, and one Native staff recruiter who engages in Outreach programs mostly within California. The Department of Native American Studies has a Student Affairs Officer who works with undergraduates. The UC Davis campus also has a counselor who specifically works with Native American students. NAS offers Summer Abroad courses (with field trips) in San Cristobal de las Casas, Chiapas, Mexico; Oaxaca, Oaxaca, Mexico; and Quito, Ecuador.

financial aid available to students: At the undergraduate level: Rising Tribal award, work-study programs, and student loans; at the graduate level: work study programs, graduate research positions, Teaching Assistantships, Associate Instructor positions; numerous university-wide fellowships.

number of students in program: About 31 undergraduate majors, 35 minors; 4 graduate students in the Designated Emphasis program, 25 graduate students in the NAS Graduate Program.

name\title of head\director: Annette L. Reed, Director degrees granted: B.A. Minor in Native American Studies; B.A. in Ethnic Studies (major or minor) w/concentration in Native American Studies.

description of program offerings: The Native American Studies program is designed to broaden educational opportunities for American Indian students and provide an educational experience for those interested within the total student body. In addition, the program provides students with a rich interdisciplinary approach to theoretical, historical, and contemporary perspectives regarding the study of native peoples. As a third goal, the program seeks to enhance cultural awareness and identity in the classroom, the campus and campus community.

To promote these goals, Native American Studies cooperates with other university agencies in recruiting, counseling, tutoring, and coordinating financial aid for American Indian students. In 2002, in conjunction with Rumsey Band of Wintun Indians, Native American Studies established the Rumsey California Native American Scholarship. Curriculum development and enhancement remains central to our program. Also, beginning in 2003 we serve as co-sponsors for the highly successful Summer Rez Program for Native American High School Students. We continue to work actively in various capacities within the larger Native American communities.

California State University, San Marcos

title of program: Native Studies

The native studies minor demands a range of knowledge focused in four areas: indigenous cultures, history, and the social and environmental contexts of native life. It makes use of the strengths of university faculty members in history, anthropology, linguistics, communication, music, visual arts, biology, and economics. The minor prepares students who expect to work with native communities to understand those communities in a broad cultural, historical, social, and environmental context. Students who earn the minor should have the particular knowledge and sensitivity necessary to work successfully as educators, administrators of businesses and tribal and other governmental bodies, and members of other professions serving native communities. (Eighteen reservations are located all or in part in San Diego County, and the California and urban American Indian population is upwards of thirty thousand, not including members of indigenous communities based in Mexico.)

areas of faculty interest/expertise: Principal native studies faculty members have expertise in Tribal Government, American Indian Political and Economic Development, American Indian history, ethnobotany and traditional medicine, and the teaching of native languages.

resources available: Through its tribal communities liaison and the university president's Native Advisory Council, the university has formed close relationships with a number of local Indian communities. The university has signed a memorandum of agreement with one reservation to encourage its students to attend Cal State San Marcos and is seeking others. The California Indian Cultural and Sovereignty Center fosters collaborative research and community service relationships between the faculty, staff, and students of CSU San Marcos and members of local Tribal communities, for the purpose of developing and conducting research projects which support the maintenance of sovereignty and culture within those communities.

financial aid available to students: In addition to other programs the university offers the annual Lee Dixon memorial scholarship for a tribally-enrolled American Indian student based on academic achievement, service to the Indian community, and financial need, with preference to incoming freshmen.

- The Evergreen State College, Olympia WA 98505; (360)866-6000
- http://nwindian.evergreen.edu/
- nwindian@evergreen.edu

degrees granted: B.A., B.S., Master of Environmental Studies, Master in Teaching. Evergreen does not have departments or majors.
description of program offerings: On-campus, yearlong coordinated study programs begin with a focus on the basic principles and concepts of the unique treaty relationship between Tribal Nations and the U.S. government. Students explore a continuum from pre-Columbian times to the global effects of colonialism and the political and cultural revitalization movements of the contemporary era, with particular attention given to the tribes of the Pacific Northwest. These programs are grounded in a recognition of the vitality and diversity of contemporary indigenous communities. A newly established program of advanced studies in tribal government management and administration has also been established within the Master in Public Administration program. A new class of students will begin the two-year program in 2004 and again in 2006. Students take required courses in Public Administration and 24 graduate credits in tribal government organization, policy development and intergovernmental Off campus, the reservation-based program emphasizes community-determined education within the tribal communities where the classes are held. Students are encouraged to value local knowledge and its place in their academic work. Learning continues through student involvement in the activities of the Longhouse Education and Cultural Center and the Northwest Indian Applied Research Institute.

areas of faculty interest/expertise: Faculty who team teach in the Native American Studies programs bring expertise in creative writing, the arts, Native American history, tribal policy, natural resource management, and tribal leadership to name just a few areas.

resources available: First Peoples recruitment and First Peoples advising services are offices which assist students with admissions, financial aid, and academic support services. Evergreen also has a strong Native Student Alliance which provides educational and cultural programming for the entire campus. The focal point of the campus is the Longhouse Education and Cultural Center, which represents a living, contemporary cultural link to the indigenous nations of the Pacific Northwest. The facility is operated as an Evergreen Public Service Institute and serves a gathering place for classes, conferences, cultural ceremonies, performances, exhibits, and community gatherings.

financial aid available to students: Federal and state financial aid are available along with various scholarships.

number of students in program: Varies; 175 class spaces available for our various full-time course offerings for the 1997-98 academic year.

name\title of head\director: Dr. Kalena Silva, Director of the College; Dr. William H. Wilson, Chair of the Academic Programs Division; Ms. Keiki Kawai'ae'a, Director of the Hale Kuamo'o degree(s) granted: B.A. (Major and minor) in Hawaiian Studies; M.A. in Hawaiian Language and Literature; M.A. in Indigenous Language and Culture Education; Ph.D. in Hawaiian and Indigenous Language and Culture Revitalization; Certificate in Basic Hawaiian Culture; Certificate in Hawaiian Language.

description of program offerings: The College was mandated by the state legislature to provide tertiary education through the medium of Hawaiian, to provide Hawaiian medium teacher training, and to provide indigenous language outreach.

The College offers some 40 undergraduate courses in Hawaiian and indigenous language and culture, most of which is offered through Hawaiian. The College offers some 25 graduate courses many of which are through Hawaiian. Specially tailored programing for other indigenous languages and cultures is provided for selected graduate students. The College also has a laboratory school program taught through Hawaiian from preschool through grade 12. (Other indigenous related courses are available in indigenous areas on campus, primarily relating to the American and other Pacific Islands.)

areas of faculty interest\expertise: Faculty expertise includes indigenous language and culture revitalization, indigenous education, immersion programing, technology and indigenous languages, language planning, ethnomusicology, ethnography, Hawaiian and other Polynesian languages. (Other faculty on campus have expertise in additional areas relating to Native Hawaiians, Pacific Islanders, and North American Natives.)

resources available: The campus has student services targeting Native Hawaiians, and also a program for American Indians. The college has an extensive Native Hawaiian collection and language revitalization collection. Also located on campus is, 'Imiloa, a 40,000 square foot fully bilingual museum integrating Hawaiian culture revitalization with science. Nawahiokalan'iopu'u Hawaiian medium laboratory school and its traditional Hawaiian gardens and animal husbandry is a major resource of the College. The Hale Kuamo'o Hawaiian language center provides research and students employment using Hawaiian. The Leoki Hawaiian language computer services is located on campus. The College's consortium partner, the 'Aha Punana Leo, has off campus offices working with the College. There is a Hawaiian club on campus and extensive Hawaiian cultural activities available off campus. The College has relationships, including exchange relationships, with other institutions serving indigenous people in North America and the Pacific.

financial aid available to students: The college has scholarships available for undergraduate Native Hawaiian students. Out-of-state Native Hawaiian students pay in-state tuition.

number of students in program: In 2005, the College had 116 undergraduate majors and 21 graduate majors. Enrollment in courses of the College is approximately 700 per semester.

distance learning: We do have distance learning capabilities and, in the past two years, have concentrated them in two of our programs: Teacher training (because the program has students teachers from four neighboring islands) and the Ph.D. (because several of the courses were taught by affiliated faculty at other institutions on the U.S. continent).

name/title of head/director: Leroy Little Bear, Chair

description of program offerings: The Department of Native American Studies is a multi-disciplinary department that offers courses from a Native perspective in Native history, art, law, politics, language, and literature. It concerns itself with Native peoples of North America, their cultures, and the various relationships that have developed between Natives and non-Natives from the fifteenth century to the present day.

Recently, the NAS Department and Management worked together to reinvent the old BESS program (Business Enterprises and Self-governing Systems of Indian, Inuit, and Métis Peoples), which is now called the FNG (First Nations Governance) program in which Management now offers a Bachelor of Management degree with a major in Native American Studies. We also offer a major in Native American Teacher Education.

degree granted: Minor

description of program offerings: Native American Studies is an interdisciplinary academic program open to all students, offering a minor in Native American Studies. The goal of the program is to teach students through Native perspectives, to understand native people, their traditions, and their right to self-determination. The program offers a curriculum that focuses on understanding how differing value systems function and developing an appreciation for Native American culture and history, including the critical issues of sovereignty and treaty rights. The presence of the Wabanaki Tribes within the State of Maine provides a tie to the history, language, and vital culture unique to this State and is a major focus of the program. The minor involves 18 credits of course work focusing on Native Americans with three required NAS-designated courses: Introduction to Native American Studies, Topics in Native American Studies, and Theory and Research Methods in Native American Studies. The remaining courses are currently offered through the English, Anthropology, History, and Modern Languages & Classics Departments. Other courses will be developed in additional disciplines, in cooperation with the Native American Studies Program, in the near future.

department in which housed: Ethnic Studies name/title of head/director: Déborah Berman Santana, Chair degrees granted: B.A.

description of program offerings: The Ethnic Studies Department prepares Mills students for leadership and development in an increasingly multicultural, transnational, and globalized society by studying the rich history of ethnic and racial diversity in the United States from the perspectives of peoples of color. The department's curriculum promotes critical thinking and creative analysis through comparative study of the social, economic, cultural, and environmental concerns and contributions of American Indians and Alaska Natives, African Americans, Latinas/os and Chicanas/os, Asian Americans, and Pacific Islanders. At Mills, we examine racial dynamics as they intersect with gender, sexuality, class, and nation, and many of our courses focus on the unique experiences of women of color. Our curriculum also explores the transnational and diasporic dimensions of racial identities.

description of program offerings: As an academic department, our primary goal is to provide and maintain the highest possible academic standards for our students and ourselves. It is the mission of the Native American Studies department to teach critical skills of writing, research, communication, and analysis which focus on the subject matter of American Indian history, literature, ecological views, language, spiritual belief systems, philosophy and contemporary concerns; and to teach about cultural diversity from the perspectives of indigenous people of this country. The Native American Studies major is interdisciplinary, offering courses from sovereignty to history to literature, and provides an opportunity for critical analysis and evaluation of the experience, perspectives, and continued evolution of Native cultures and history as diverse people. Native American Studies, as an academic discipline, is committed to examining the contemporary and ancient experiences and ways of life of the first Americans from their perspective. The curriculum is designed to provide a study of American Indians from a holistic and humanistic viewpoint by focusing upon their cultural, historical, and contemporary life. Courses are designed for both Native American and non-Native American students so they can better understand human similarities and differences, thereby leading to the development of increased communications and good interpersonal relationships.

Minor

PSU's Native American Studies (NAS) Program was inaugurated in 2004 and presently offers a Minor in Native American Studies. NAS is an interdisciplinary program with coursework drawn from Anthropology, Art, English, History, Linguistics, Political Science, and other departments and schools. The substantive focus of this curriculum is the histories and cultures of American Indians, Alaska native, and Native Hawaiians. The minor is meant to serve three primary constituencies: students who have a serious academic interest in Native Americans and who wish to combine the study of Native Americans with their major; students who plan careers in Indian or native affairs; and students who have a nascent interest in Native Americans and wish to fulfill their general education requirements with courses in this area. This program prepares students to work for tribal governments and native-oriented organizations as professionals, or as informed professionals in organizations not specifically dedicated to native issues, but which interact with tribal governments on a government-to-government or business basis.

- http://www.css.edu/x1142.xml

degrees granted: B.A. minor.

description of program offerings: The American Indian Studies program, within the Department of History, Politics and Culture, provides opportunities for St. Scholastica students to study history, contemporary developments, tribal cultures, language and to interact with Indian professionals and peers.

The American Indian Studies minor is a 24-credit semester program designed to complement programs in a variety of different majors. The objectives of the major are: (1) to promote awareness and understanding of the history, culture, and philosophy of American Indians; (2) to recognize the different life experiences of American Indians; and (3) to improve the ability of students to integrate this knowledge with their future careers.

The Social Work and American Indian Studies programs have also collaborated to design a course of study that builds on traditional social work methods with specific knowledge about American Indians. The student is prepared more fully to understand the uniqueness of social work practice and American Indians through the study of cultural, social, and political problems that face American Indians. The beginning social work practitioner learns to be sensitive and skillful in intervention with individuals, groups, families, and large systems of this population.

areas of faculty interest\expertise: Social work, art, American Indian women.

resources available: A special center, the Indian Cultural and Resource Center, serves as the nucleus of the various Indian programs and activities. Aanji-Bimaadizyang is the students’ club and involves itself in such activities as Indian Awareness Week, fund-raising, peer advising, and community outreach.

financial aid available to students: The Indian Scholarship Program is offered by the U.S. Bureau of Indian Affairs, often in cooperation with state education departments, for individuals of American Indian descent who meet eligibility requirements. The College also offers one additional scholarship for Indian students.

description of program offerings: The department's educational mission and objectives have a special responsibility to Native peoples of California and the United States. California is the land on which the university and department rests; CSU is a public institution in the United States education system. Therefore, significant aspects of the program and curriculum are focused on Natives of California, US-Native politics, and North American Indian cultures with the aim of preparing students to work with Native groups and urban communities in California and the United States. The program also includes a comparative perspective and coalitional politics with Native peoples of U.S. occupied territories and more broadly within the Americas and the Pacific. It balances classroom education with an active community participatory learning component. Therefore, it best prepares students for going on to do graduate work or a number of different careers with Native peoples in not only California but internationally.

- http://www.usask.ca/nativestudies/

degrees granted: B.A.; Honours; M.A.; special case PhD.

description of program offerings: Native Studies at the University of Saskatchewan actively supports the promotion and definition of Native Studies as an independent field of study that has at its core the scholarly enquiry into Aboriginal society and societies. The Department of Native Studies seeks to provide an intellectual milieu where teaching and research are well grounded in the priorities and knowledge of Saskatchewan's Aboriginal communities, all the while placing them within the larger fabric of the Canadian Aboriginal experience and the emergent global, social phenomenon of indigeneity. Researchers and students in Native Studies at the University of Saskatchewan explore and seek to understand the fundamental nature of Aboriginal society. As a centre of academic inquiry based on sound pedagogical and research principles, the Department of Native Studies is striving to develop more expansive and innovative views on Indigenous Knowledge, going well beyond simple binaries like juxtaposing Indigenous knowledge in opposition to Western scholarship. Rather the Department has taken on the more challenging task of demanding excellence in conventional scholarship in addition to developing new and culturally appropriate methodologies and theories sourced in the Aboriginal life. An increasing number of our courses are offered through distance and online learning.

areas of faculty interest/expertise: The department has six faculty members. Our areas of specialization include First Nations and Métis history; labor; northern development and resource use; health policy and the politics of social health; political and legal issues; international Indigenous issues, indigenous knowledge, anti-colonial research, transdisciplinary research methods and theory; and Cree language.

degrees granted: B.A. with specializations either in Oceti Sakowin Oyate Studies or Lakota Language

description of program offerings: Native Studies offers a program of study grounding students in the fundamentals of the discipline as well as preparing them for the challenges that are unique to Native Peoples and Native Country, including the nation-to-nation relationship that exists between Native Peoples and modern states and non-state actors. The program is flexible enough for students to explore questions of major interest, to allow opportunities for meaningful undergraduate research, and to engage questions unique to Native Country through special topics courses and a senior thesis. The program also includes a specialization in either Oceti Sakowin Oyate Studies (People of the Seven Council Fires, or more commonly known as the Dakota/Lakota/Nakota people) or Lakota language.

The Native Studies department recognizes that students may be fluent speakers of the Dakota/Lakota/Nakota language and possess a proficient knowledge of the culture. A challenge test may be taken for LAKL 140. Students must enroll for the LAKL 140 course, however. The test will be administered and scored at the beginning of the semester the student is enrolled. If a student earns the minimum required score on the challenge test, s/he will receive credit for the LAKL 140 course and will not be required to attend class. A student will only be allowed to take the challenge test once. LAKL 245 is Lakota language table and is a co-requisite for both the introductory and intermediate Lakota language courses.

areas of faculty interest/expertise: Oceti Sakowin Oyate Studies; Lakota language; Oral History; Native Studies history; intellectual and disciplinary development of Native Studies; Self-determination and decolonization.

resources available: South Dakota Oral History Center and American Indian Research Project, Native American Cultural Center, Tiospaye U., Native Studies Collaborative, TRIO, Community for the Advancement of Native Studies. The Native Studies program is also geographically located near the following Native homelands: Omaha, Ho Chunk, Oceti Sakowin Oyate (Santee Sioux, Flandreau Sioux, Yankton Sioux, Lower Brulé Sioux, Crow Creek Sioux, Upper Sioux, Lower Sioux, Shakopee Sioux, Prairie Island Sioux, Oglala Sioux, Rosebud Sioux, Cheyenne River, Sioux, Standing Rock Sioux, Sisseton Wahpeton Dakota, and Spirit Lake Sioux). The program is located near the following Native colleges and universities: Sinte Gleska University, Oglala Lakota College, Sitting Bull College, Sisseton Wahpeton College, Cankdeska Cikana Community College, United Tribes Technical College, Nebraska Indian Community College, and Little Priest Tribal College.

financial aid available to students: Graduate assistantships.

degree(s) granted: Minor description of program offerings: The Native American Studies Minor provides a broad range of information about the indigenous or first people of the Americas. It surveys archaeological, cultural, historical, and current perspectives of and about Native Americans (or First Nations). This interdisciplinary program includes courses from Anthropology, Sociology, History, English, Music, Art, Psychology and Health Departments. Some of today's important issues are emphasized and placed in the context of cultural history. One purpose of the minor is to introduce students to the tremendous richness and diversity that is present within today's Native cultures. The Native American Studies minor affirms the college's commitment, as a public university, to establish an academic program which supports the interest that many students have in Native American issues. The College works in partnership with representatives from Onondaga Nation to correct misconceptions about native people.

areas of faculty interest/expertise: Haudenosaunee (Iroquois), New York State Native American History, Eastern USA Native American/Canadian First Nations Archaeology/Ethnology/Ethnohistory, Maya Language/Ethnology.

resources available: Multicultural publications and audiovisual collection; Native American Film Festival, which features speakers involved in the production of the films, as well as activists and local leaders; opportunities to visit the Onondaga Nation Territory, as well as other Haudenosaunee Nation territories within our region are often planned. Guest speakers from many Native American cultures regularly are invited to the college to enrich the program. Native American musicians, artists, craftspeople, and storytellers make presentations on campus, providing added opportunities for students to meet these nationally and internationally known artists.
